Can't stand the PATH? Don't keep it to yourself

New cars don't appease all PATH riders.

A Hoboken Now reader (who, apparently, hates the PATH) wrote in to let everyone know:

We have gotten so sick of how lousy the NJ PATH service has gotten over recent years, that we had to do something about it. So some commuters have banded together and created <http://www.pathsux.com/>, an independent survey of NJ PATH train service.

If you are as pissed off with their poor service and crowded trains as we are, please fill it out.

5:49 p.m. Editor's note: The Port Authority responded with this statement:

The Port Authority is listening to its passengers' concerns and has made a significant commitment to improve our PATH system by investing more than $3 billion in new cars, track signals and modernized stations over the next decade. New PATH railcars, with state-of-the-art amenities, are already being put into service under the plan to completely overhaul the 340-car fleet between now and 2011.

I'll tell you one thing. Why no poles in the middle anymore? Now if I don't get a seat, I have to worry about people's legs and things feel even more cramped than they were. You're better than that PATH!
